Article 2 Awardee

The awardee is the representative of the University's creator, who is appointed in writing by the research team to represent the research team.

Article 3 Reward Criteria

The annual technology licensing or transfer cases of the University's representative creators are rated and awarded in the following manner:

1. Scoring method and ranking

- a. The score is determined by the total amount of income from technology licensing or transfer in the previous year for the representative creators. If the amount of equity income of each representative creator reaches NT$3 million or more in the previous year, each of the top three trophies will be awarded in order of the amount of equity income, with the first place awarding the "Golden Eagle Award", the second place awarding the "Silver Wing Award", and the third place awarding the "Bronze Feather Award". If the equity income includes the calculation of shareholding, there shall be at most one awardee in the year. If there is a tied winner with the same amount of equity income, one additional winner will be added to the quota of that ranking.
- b. The above-mentioned equity income includes cash and equity income from innovative business, if it is cash income, it is calculated on the basis of actual income; if it is equity income from innovative business, it is calculated on the basis of net income from the company's income tax return for the previous year. For the calculation of equity income from innovative businesses, the company must have been registered for less than eight years and the University must still hold equity in the company in order for the company to be included in the evaluation.
- c. If a representative creator has received the Golden Eagle Award three times, the third time will be awarded the Lifetime Achievement Award, and the representative creator who has received the Lifetime Achievement Award will no longer be included in the list of recipients of this award.

2. If the income of each representative creator in the current year does not reach the qualification of the award after calculating in the above manner, the award will not be granted.
